This course will provide information on research funding sources, grant mechanisms, and preparation in writing NIH proposals with a focus on addiction health services research. Students will learn about protection of human subjects, developing budgets, presenting research findings, reviewing manuscripts, publishing research findings, and job seeking.

This course meets on Tuesdays, beginning April 4th at the ISAP offices. UCLA graduate students in other departments who are interested in learning about writing a competitive NIH proposal are encouraged to enroll in the class.
